WEEKEND WARRIOR

GO FORTH AND BE AWESOME

BOMB HILLS!

North America's hottest mountain-biking parks and the two-wheeled whips that rule them.

DIABLO FREERIDE PARK

VERNON, NEW JERSEY

With 40 rugged trails and a speedy gondola that whisks exhausted bikers back to the summit in under six minutes, this New Jersey nexus is fast becoming one of the best places to ride on the entire Right Coast. And at a mere 47 miles from NYC, it's the ideal getaway for psycho bike messengers looking to escape the hustle and bustle and risk their lives on dirt for a change.

WHISTLER BLACKCOMB MOUNTAIN BIKE PARK

WHISTLER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, CANADA

Like everything else in Canada (minus their national defense), Whistler's mountain-bike park is immense and imposing. This place has everything from mellow cruisers to steep single-track trails littered with rocks and roots. Lucky for you, every last inch of the world-renowned madness is well-marked with green, blue and black trail signs.

BOOTLEG CANYON MOUNTAIN BIKE PARK

BOULDER CITY, NEVADA

Right this minute is probably the best time of year to explore classic (and classy) Bootleg Canyon trails like G-String, Kavorkian and Poopshoot. Why? Because summer temperatures in this desert outpost, just 40 minutes from Vegas, are sweltering enough to weld your ass to the seat. If you're ready to charge something especially harrowing and steep, check out Elevator Shaft's 22 percent grade.

Ride this: The Scott USA Ransom Limited ($7,499), a superserious all-mountain setup that will bring the larger-than-life mountain biking at Bootleg back down to earth.

RAY'S MTB INDOOR PARK

CLEVELAND, OHIO

You wouldn't expect to find top-notch riding smack-dab in the middle of a rundown industrial district of Cleveland, but Ray Petro, an avid rider with too much time on his hands, decided to make it happen. His indoor freestyle facility has tons of man-made features, including a pump track, a street park and a giant foam pit. That's right, we said indoor track. We hate to break it to you, Mother Nature, but you've been officially out-extremed.

Ride this: The Santa Cruz Jackal ($1,040), a top-of-the-line freeride bike that jumps better than an Olympic diver.
