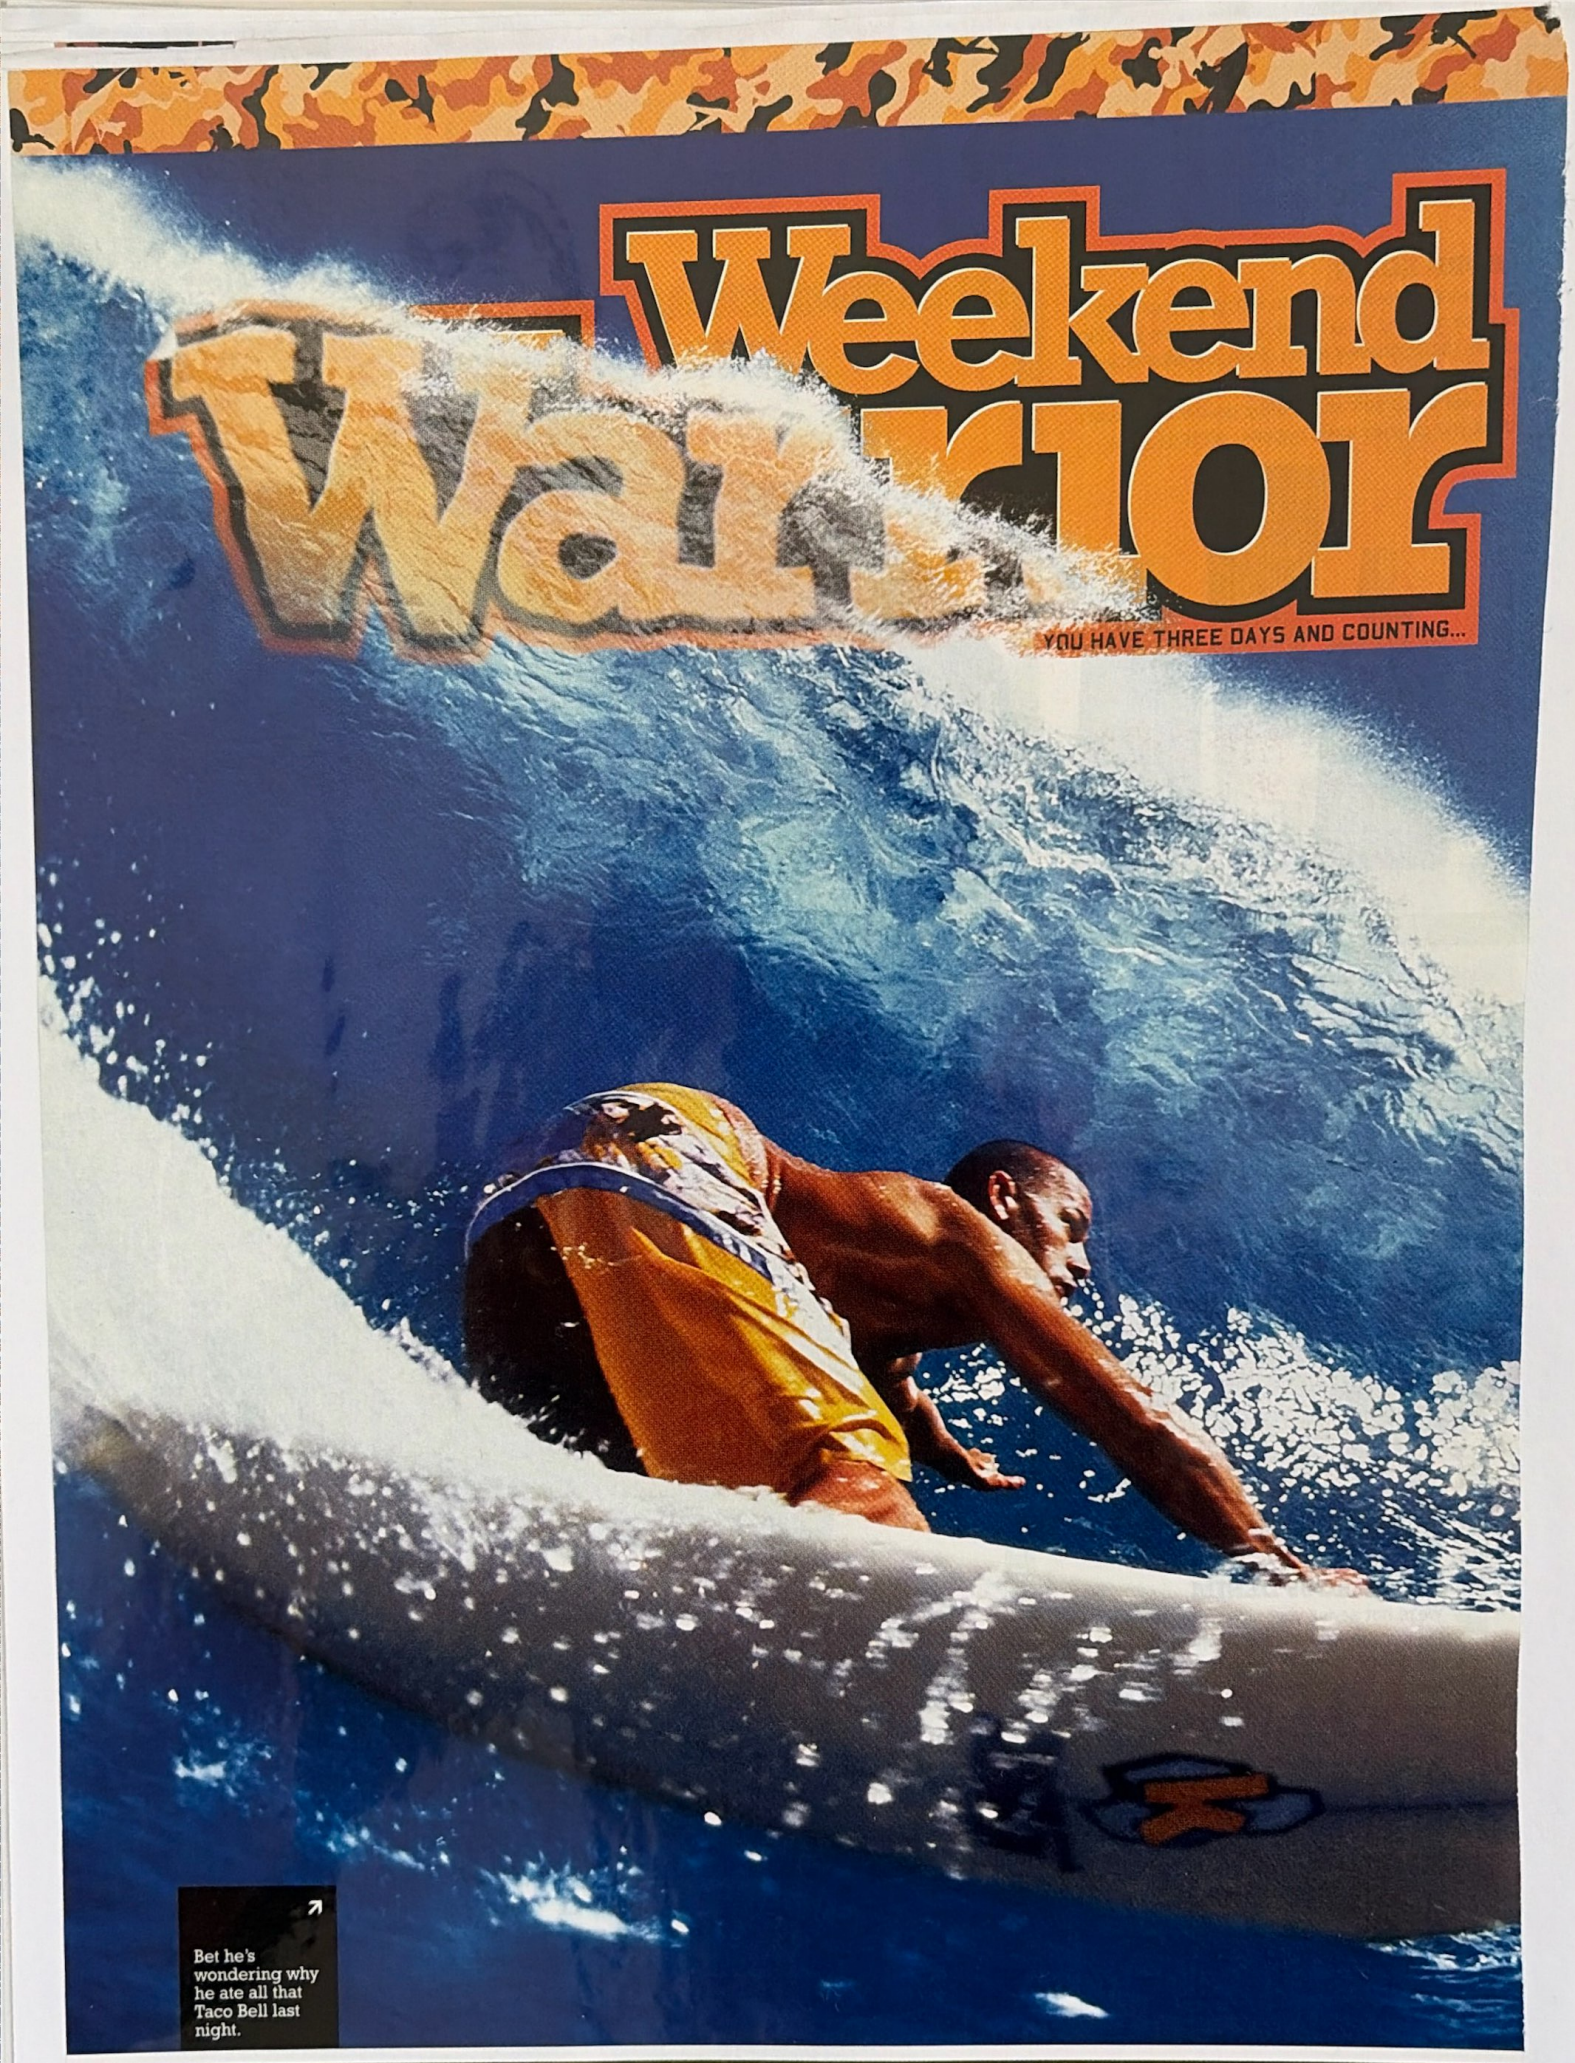
YOU HAVE THREE DAYS AND COUNTING...

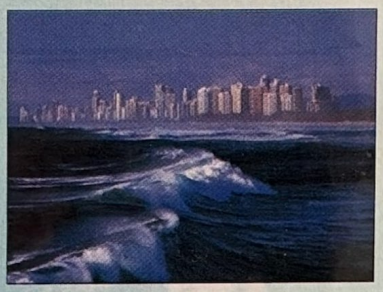


Bet he's wondering why he ate all that Taco Bell last night.

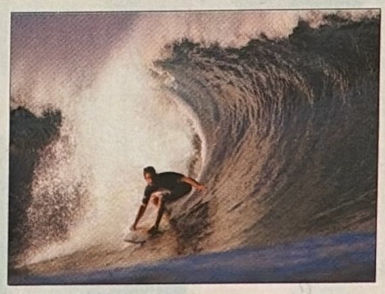
CATCH YOUR BIG BREAK

GIVE WINTER THE FINGER AND HIT THESE SURF SPOTS AROUND THE GLOBE.

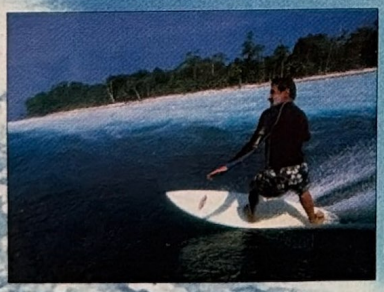
LOWER TRESTLES, SAN DIEGO
"It's pretty hard to get a wave out there on a normal day, because there are so many hungry locals trying to get peaked," says Australian pro Taj Burrow of this SoCal sweet spot. "But when they have a contest, it's unreal." So is nipple rash.
Weapon: Shortboard for optimal airs.



KIRRA BEACH, GOLD COAST, AUSTRALIA
"Australia has some of the most perfect point breaks with sand bottoms on the Gold Coast," says surfing legend Kelly Slater. "Kirra is my favorite." These waves are crazy-fast, so hold on to your trunks.
Weapon: Shortboard for ripping cutbacks.

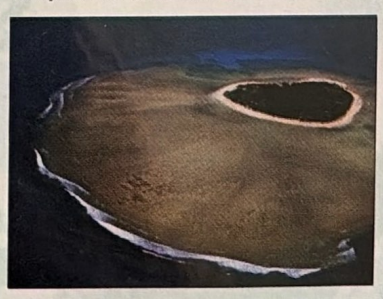


TEAPUHO'O, TAHITI
"You just get the best barrels of your life out there," says rising star Fred Patacchia Jr. "It's eye candy, too, just watching guys get totally annihilated, coming close to death or getting some of the best waves of their lives." Don't tell Mom.
Weapon: Pintail under seven feet.



MENTAWAI ISLANDS, INDONESIA
If you like technical waves breaking over dangerous coral, Mentawai is right up your alley. "You get barreled, you can do big turns, you can do the airs…it's really high-performance," says Burrow. We suggest bringing a stunt double.
Weapon: Small gun for lightning turns.

PIPELINE, OAHU, HAWAII
This is the Holy Grail of surf breaks, where waves can be as thick as houses and as high as buildings. Tall buildings. "Pipeline is a peak you can go either way on," says Slater. "It's really intense." Maybe we'll just, um, watch from here?
Weapon: Seven-foot (or longer) pintail.



CLOUDBREAK, TOBERUA ISLAND, FIJI
This South Pacific gem is actually a reef in the middle of the ocean, 10 minutes from the nearest inhabited island. "It's a perfect left. It runs for about 300 yards," says Patacchia. "It's one of the best waves I have ever surfed in my life."
Weapon: Wider guns for stability.

COMING TO TERMS LEARN THE LINGO OR GET AN "I'M A POSER" TATTOO.

SHORTBOARD
A supremely maneuverable board in the five- to seven-foot range.

GUN
A board that has a beefed-up construction and a pulled-in tail and nose to better achieve high speeds. Think of it as a shortboard on performance-enhancing steroids.

LONGBOARD
An extra-stable cruising board with a rounded nose and a traditional length of over nine feet. Considered by most to be the Cadillac DeVille of surfboards.

TOW-IN BOARD
This indestructible shortboard is designed with foot straps for the sole purpose of towing (un)loved ones into enormous waves. Goodnight, and good luck!

PINTAIL
Any board with a tail that ends in a distinct point. In addition to looking cool and retro, this design makes the board more responsive.
